BOOKING DEPOSIT

GFD Film Library require a booking deposit per title payable in advance of your screening to secure your licence. For commercial screenings, the booking deposit will be held until your commercial returns form has been returned us, this must be completed within 48 hours of the screening or the maximum capacity will be charged at 35%.

If your ticket return form shows that the royalties payable do not exceed the minimum guarantee, then you will be refunded with any balance owed to you. The booking deposit is required by the studios as security to guarantee that royalties can be collected on behalf of the copyright holder. Should you continue to trade with GFD Film Library into the future then we can look at reducing the booking deposit. A utility bill and proof of ID will also be required when setting up an account.

In order to allow event organisers to generate cash flow for their event through, a licence will be provisionally issued to them to allow advertising for their screening to take place so that online ticket sales can be made by their customers. The booking deposit will then be required to be paid, no later than, 3 days prior to the screening date. Failure to pay the booking deposit 72 hours in advance of the screening will result in all licences being revoked.
